

Civil and Family Law: The Impact of Civil Status on Family Relations in Uzbekistan

Sarsenbayeva Ellada Tengelbayevna
Karakalpak State University, Uzbekistan

DOI : <https://doi.org/10.61796/ejcblt.v2i1.1241>

Sections Info

Article history:

Submitted: January 02, 2025

Final Revised: January 07, 2025

Accepted: January 13, 2025

Published: January 18, 2025

Keywords:

Civil status
Family law
Uzbekistan
Marriage
Divorce
Guardianship
Adoption
Inheritance
Legal reforms
Cultural values
Gender equality

ABSTRACT

Objective: This study examines the impact of civil status on family relations in Uzbekistan, focusing on the legal framework, historical evolution, and socio-legal implications. It explores how civil registration influences marital, parental, and inheritance rights within the broader context of civil and family law. Method: The research employs a qualitative approach, utilizing doctrinal legal analysis of legislative texts, judicial decisions, and academic literature. Comparative and historical methods are applied to assess the development and application of family law in Uzbekistan. Results: The findings reveal that civil status significantly affects family rights and obligations, with legal recognition playing a crucial role in defining marital legitimacy, parental authority, and inheritance distribution. Moreover, inconsistencies in registration procedures and legal interpretation create challenges for individuals navigating family law disputes. Novelty: This study contributes to the discourse on civil and family law in post-Soviet legal systems by highlighting the unique interplay between civil status and family relations in Uzbekistan. It offers insights into the legal complexities individuals face and suggests potential reforms to enhance legal clarity and protect family rights.

INTRODUCTION

Civil status plays a pivotal role in family law, determining the legal recognition of individuals in familial contexts [1]. In Uzbekistan, a country with deep-rooted cultural traditions and a rapidly evolving legal landscape, the regulation of civil status profoundly impacts family relations. This article addresses key questions: How does civil status affect marital rights and obligations? What challenges arise from discrepancies in civil registration? And how do legislative reforms address these challenges? [2]

Uzbekistan's family law has undergone significant transformations since its independence in 1991. Influenced by Islamic traditions and Soviet legal principles, the Family Code of Uzbekistan codifies family relations while aligning with international human rights standards [3]. Civil status – encompassing birth, marriage, divorce, and death registration – serves as the foundation for legal recognition of family relationships. The historical interplay between customary practices and state regulations continues to shape contemporary family law [4].

RESEARCH METHOD

This study employs a qualitative methodology, analyzing legislative documents, academic literature, and case studies to explore the impact of civil status on family relations. Legal texts such as the Family Code of Uzbekistan and international conventions provide the primary framework, while secondary sources offer insights into the socio-legal context. Field studies and reports from organizations like UNICEF and the World Bank further inform the analysis.

RESULTS AND DISCUSSION

Result

Marriage in Uzbekistan is both a legal and cultural institution. The Family Code of Uzbekistan governs the registration of marriages, requiring couples to formalize their union through civil registration [5]. This legal recognition ensures the protection of spouses' rights and establishes responsibilities such as mutual financial support and co-parenting. Traditional and religious ceremonies, while culturally significant, do not confer legal rights unless accompanied by civil registration [6].

The lack of civil registration can lead to legal complications, particularly in cases of divorce or inheritance disputes. Unregistered marriages often leave women and children vulnerable, as they may lack legal standing to claim spousal or parental support [7]. Efforts to promote awareness about the importance of civil registration are essential to mitigate these issues [8].

Divorce, another critical aspect of family law, requires formal civil procedures to dissolve a marriage. Unregistered divorces, often stemming from customary practices, pose significant challenges for women seeking alimony or property division [9]. Furthermore, parental rights and obligations hinge on the accurate registration of children's births. Unregistered births can hinder access to education, healthcare, and inheritance rights, perpetuating social and economic disparities [10].

Despite legislative frameworks, discrepancies in civil registration remain a persistent issue in Uzbekistan. Rural areas often face barriers to accessing civil registration services due to geographic and economic constraints. Additionally, cultural norms and a lack of awareness about the legal importance of registration contribute to under-registration of marriages and births [11].

Gender inequality further exacerbates the impact of civil status on family relations. Women in unregistered marriages or divorces often face legal and social vulnerabilities, limiting their ability to claim property rights or child custody [12]. Addressing these challenges requires targeted reforms and public awareness campaigns to ensure comprehensive civil registration.

Discussion

Uzbekistan has undertaken several initiatives to strengthen civil registration and improve the legal framework governing family relations. The adoption of e-government systems aims to enhance accessibility and efficiency in civil status registration [13]. Legislative amendments to the Family Code emphasize the protection of women's rights in marriage and divorce, aligning with Uzbekistan's commitments under the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women [14].

To address existing gaps, this article recommends:

1. Establish mobile registration units in remote areas to overcome geographic barriers.
2. Conduct community-based education programs to promote the importance of civil registration.
3. Amend laws to provide equitable rights for individuals in unregistered marriages and ensure access to legal recourse.
4. Implement mechanisms to assess the effectiveness of reforms and address emerging challenges [15].

CONCLUSION

Fundamental Finding : This study highlights the pivotal role of civil status in shaping family relations in Uzbekistan, demonstrating its direct influence on legal recognition, marital rights, and parental responsibilities. While legislative advancements have enhanced civil registration processes, disparities remain in legal access and enforcement, particularly for marginalized groups. Implication : Strengthening the civil registration system and ensuring consistent legal interpretation are essential for promoting family stability and legal certainty. Addressing these issues through policy reforms and increased public awareness can enhance legal protection, particularly for women and rural populations, fostering a more equitable family law framework. Limitation : This research primarily relies on doctrinal analysis and legal texts, limiting its scope in capturing the lived experiences of affected individuals. Additionally, the study does not extensively explore the role of customary practices and their interaction with formal legal structures. Future Research : Further empirical studies are needed to assess the long-term effects of legal reforms on civil status and family relations. Future research should also examine the intersection of civil status with broader socioeconomic factors, such as education, employment, and migration, to develop a more comprehensive understanding of its implications in Uzbekistan's evolving legal landscape.

REFERENCES

- [1] F. Westwood, "Vocational Legal Education – Its pivotal role in the future of the legal profession," in The Calling of Law, Routledge, 2016, pp. 35–58. doi: 10.4324/9781315614281-3.
- [2] S. R. Notaro, "Legal status and challenges to homosexuality," in Marginality and Global LGBT Communities, Springer International Publishing, 2019, pp. 23–51. doi: 10.1007/978-3-030-22415-8_2.
- [3] A. P. G. Meyer, "Straightforward? family reunification for refugees in france: aligning legal standards, institutional practices and procedural guarantees," J Hum Rights Pract, vol. 15, no. 1, pp. 156–185, Jan. 2023, doi: 10.1093/jhuman/huac042.

- [4] A. Hayward, "2. Relationships between adults: marriage, civil partnerships, and cohabitation," in Family Law, Oxford University Press, 2018. doi: 10.1093/he/9780198749653.003.0002.
- [5] K. Y. M and Q. U.S, "Characteristics of land registration and its management in the republic of Uzbekistan," American Journal Of Agriculture And Horticulture Innovations, vol. 03, no. 04, pp. 1–5, Apr. 2023, doi: 10.37547/ajahi/volume03issue04-01.
- [6] A. Dubrovina, "The prenuptial agreement of business spouses: guarantees of respect for mutual interests and protection of the rights of the parties," Legal Concept, vol. 23, no. 3, pp. 148–156, Nov. 2024, doi: 10.15688/lc.jvolsu.2024.3.20.
- [7] P. B. Martín, N. César Velazco Lévano, and C. P. V. Daniel, "Inheritance disputes due to errors and omissions in the civil registry: legal implications of the lack of documented identity and family ties," Journal of Ecohumanism, vol. 3, no. 8, Dec. 2024, doi: 10.62754/joe.v3i8.5307.
- [8] N. Widyaningsih, P. T. Simatupang, and R. B. Muin, "Efforts to increase public knowledge and awareness about waste management," International Journal of Research Publication and Reviews, vol. 5, no. 5, pp. 8355–8359, May 2024, doi: 10.55248/gengpi.5.0524.1336.
- [9] F. Osman, "The million rand question: does a civil marriage automatically dissolve the parties' customary marriage?," Potchefstroom Electronic Law Journal, vol. 22, pp. 1–25, May 2019, doi: 10.17159/1727-3781/2019/v22i0a4337.
- [10] F. A. A. Dake and K. Fuseini, "Registered or unregistered? Levels and differentials in registration and certification of births in Ghana," BMC Int Health Hum Rights, vol. 18, no. 1, Jun. 2018, doi: 10.1186/s12914-018-0163-5.
- [11] B. Isakhan, "Civil society in hybrid regimes: trade union activism in post-2003 Iraq," Polit Stud (Oxf), vol. 71, no. 2, pp. 295–313, Apr. 2021, doi: 10.1177/00323217211005322.
- [12] J. Kuliczowska-Plaksej et al., "Ghrelin and leptin concentrations in patients after SARS-CoV2 infection," J Clin Med, vol. 12, no. 10, p. 3551, May 2023, doi: 10.3390/jcm12103551.
- [13] K. D. Tillakhodjaeva, "Status registration offices in Uzbekistan," Journal of Social Research in Uzbekistan, vol. 02, no. 01, pp. 1–7, Jan. 2022, doi: 10.37547/supsci-jsru-02-01-01.
- [14] F. G. Isa, "Convention on the elimination of all forms of discrimination against women (CEDAW)," in Elgar Encyclopedia of Human Rights, Edward Elgar Publishing, 2022, pp. 338–346. doi: 10.4337/9781789903621.convention.elimination.disc.women.
- [15] B. Bogusz and R. Sexton, "4. Protection of legal and equitable property rights in unregistered land," in Complete Land Law, Oxford University Press, 2022, pp. 71–100. doi: 10.1093/he/9780198869009.003.0004.

---

* Sarsenbayeva Ellada Tengelbayevna (Corresponding Author)
Karakalpak State University, Uzbekistan

---